Online Bachelor of Science in Education

Special Education

Why a BSED – Special Education?

The Bachelor of Science in Education – Special Education (BSED-SPED) program prepares students to enter the field of special education and address Georgia's growing need for highly qualified teachers. Through a shared online curriculum offered by the USG, students complete coursework focused on evidence-based practices, inclusive instruction, and individualized supports for students with disabilities.

The program leads to certification in interrelated special education (Preschool through 12 Grade) and prepares graduates to serve students typically educated in interrelated classroom settings.

Candidates develop the skills needed to:

- design and implement IEPs
- collaborate with gen ed teachers
- support students with high-incidence disabilities

Special Education Access

This program model expands access while strengthening Georgia's special education teacher pipeline.
